FLAGSTONE residents have taken a key step in taking a hold of the area’s future after a group of locals mobilised last week to form a community association.

The decision to form an association was taken at a meeting on the grounds of Flagstone State Community College last Tuesday.

A wide cross-section of local stakeholders were in attendance, with the common goal being to serve the interests of Flagstone now and into the future.

The estate’s developers, pastors, residents, academics and school leaders were all in the mix and together, they produced a unanimous verdict in favour of an association. Ten people were chosen to form a steering committee charged with guiding the group during its fledgling stages.