Rationale	Those working closely with people in the counselling context need to develop not only basic interpersonal skills but to do so in the context of growing self-awareness. These skills, which are grounded in research and empirical support, are essential for the development of a strong therapeutic relationship, one of the primary factors for promoting positive outcomes for the counselling clients. This unit helps students to develop well-rounded interpersonal skills by means of specific practice and feedback from others. The unit approaches the topic of counselling skills in a holistic manner, integrating practice with communication purpose, Christian worldview principles, and cultural awareness. As self-awareness and the ability to monitor the impact of self on others is a key value for Christian Heritage College's counselling graduates, students will also have the opportunity to reflect on their own progress towards professional competence and receive feedback from others in this regard.
