| Rationale | People helping practitioners increasingly work within a complex array of practice contexts which require them to interact with diverse groups holding different priorities. It is important for such workers to be able to draw on and critique an applied social sciences practice ethical framework within a set of policies – understanding and applying models, approaches, strategies – to make sense of their professional practice in their contexts. This practicum is the second half of the practicum commenced in SO230. Applied social sciences skills and processes are also mastered by practice and therefore embedded in this unit. While several units in the course equip students with skills and theory necessary for effective work in applied social sciences fields, it is not until the student uses those skills in a real life setting that he or she can really appreciate the utilisation of the skills. It is expected that students will experience application of theories, the organisational dynamics of settings, the integration of ethical behaviour and the challenges of building relationships with clients and establishing appropriate strategies and procedures within a specific practical environment. | | | | | | | | | | |

| Unit summary | This professional placement unit is the second part of SO230 and also consists of a practicum of 100 hours (of which 90 hours must comprise actual applied social sciences experience in one of the discipline areas). This may be undertaken in a minimum of eight weeks and a maximum of 14 weeks. The placement occurs in an actual applied social sciences context and requires students to meet with their designated mentors for one hour for every 10 hours of activity. This unit comprises the second half of a 200 hour applied social sciences placement in the one setting. Briefing sessions will be held both before and during the placement to facilitate the success of the experience and to establish working relationships between students, placement mentors, CHC and the organisation that is offering the placement. Sessions after the placement will give students the opportunity to share their knowledge and to debrief about the events and learning from the placement. |
